【Alishan National Scenic Area】

Alishan is blessed with bountiful natural resources, such as sun rise views, a sea of clouds and old forests. Especially as a popular folk song goes, Alishan has amazed people with its “lush green mountains and deep blue waters.” No matter in spring, summer, autumn or winter, visitors can expect to appreciate some of its beauty. For years, Alishan has been famous for its historical forest railway and indigenous tribes, too.

The trails of Greater Alishan are must-visit destinations for nature lovers; the trails pass cascading waterfalls, through lush forest and tend to make visitors forget it's time to leave. In earlier times, when transport was inconvenient, trails were built to connect mountain settlements and, with an increase in interest in natural tourism, these have now been repaired and turned into scenic trails that are one of the distinctive features of the greater Alishan area.

The sunrise, cloud sea, forest, sunset glow and railway are known as the “five wonders of Alishan,” with the sunrise particularly renowned. Every morning before dawn visitors from all over the world wait for the sun to emerge from the dark blue screen before their eyes, observing the light change from faint orange red rays until a bright new day is born. Alishan is also shrouded in mist and cloud much of the year and the cloud sea is also a famous wonder of Alishan.

The Alishan Mountain Railway was opened in 1911. Used in its earlier days for transporting timber, when the policy of conservation of forest resources was introduced it became a tourist railway. The locomotive pulls the cypress carriages through the misty forest, passing fallen cherry blossom, also greeting the dawn each day, the turning gears and loud whistle arousing special railway memories.
